CLIQ® FAQs

What's the Approver Function and how is it set in the CLIQ Local Manager?

With the approver functions, the reading of the event logs from cylinders and keys is technically released. A separate programming key is required for this.

To activate the approver function, a tick is set in the general settings.

Once the approver function is activated, an "approver" role is available in the user roles. A programming key must be issued to a person and then the user must be given the Approver role.

The tick once set in the settings can only be deactivated together with an authorisation key!
